Outlining a city's borders, especially in the era of globalisation, is not an easy task. This holds true also for the City of Torino, which has been both the political and industrial capital of Italy.

Torino, through its local administration bodies, has chosen to be a City open to the world, constantly growing, importing and exporting its know-how, and working in order to attract to its metropolitan area huge investments aimed at opening new research centres and businesses and at developing local economy.

This strategy gave rise in 2016 to the Open for business programme, conceived together with Piedmont Agency for Investments, Export and Tourism, Piedmont Region, Unione Industriale, Chamber of Commerce, University and Politecnico of Torino, in order to foster the creation of new businesses and the attraction of foreign investments, as well as to promote the well-established top level production activities already working in the aerospace, automotive, biomedical, telecommunication and food sectors.

The international vocation of the City of Torino is supported by the relations it holds with Cities, institutions and bodies all over the world and by the services it offers to people coming to Torino from other countries. The tourism and cultural offer, for instance, are two of the key assets of its economy, as well as the top level universities enrolling every year thousands of foreign students.

In 2016 the City of Torino carried out several international activities, hosting the celebrations for the 150 years of diplomatic relations between Italy and Japan, the Interparliamentary Conference on the European Social Charter and the World Congress of Landscape Architects, just to name a few. Moreover, the City took part in the Global Islamic Economy Summit held in the United Arab Emirates, in the World Travel Market of London, and in several missions abroad, for instance in the Palestinian Territories to develop cooperation projects. Torino is definitely a city open to the world, able to build and maintain long-lasting relations in the five continents. Its international relations strengthen the leading role, widely recognized, that the City of Torino has created over time and that it will keep on promoting and boosting as one of its key features.

Chiara Appendino, Mayor of Torino

UNICRI promotes, coordinates and conducts research and collaborates with Member States and local institutions by supporting policy formulation, implementation and evaluation, and field activities with the aim of establishing a reliable information base, and building technical assistance capacity on issues of social concern, including emerging and often transnational forms of crime. The Institute develops strategies, policies, practical models and systems for crime prevention and control so as to contribute to socio-economic development, increased security and the protection of human rights.

UNICRI employs a broad range of tools to achieve its goals, including rigorous social science research methods, developing effective educational and training pedagogies; producing and sharing knowledge and good practices; assisting Member States and local institutions in developing action plans; facilitating partnerships between diverse stakeholders; and creating an environment conducive to cooperation that fosters development.

Strengthening justice, preventing illicit trafficking and transnational organized crime, promoting assets recovery, mitigating the risks related to the improper use of new technologies and chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear materials; preventing violent extremism, counterfeiting, cyber crimes and crimes against the environment are among the current priorities of UNICRI. Trafficking in persons, gender-based drug prevention and the improvement of prison systems are also issues addressed by UNICRI's programmes. Moreover, great attention is paid to victims of crime, children and young people at risk.

The key to the effectiveness of UNICRI is the development of strong relationships with a wide range of partners. The Institute promotes knowledge and exchange of expertise among countries, local institutions, the scientific community, civil society and the private sector for the creation of platforms for dialogue in addressing common risks and needs, enabling the development of joint actions according to a holistic and multidisciplinary approach that leads to positive and sustainable change.

Public utilities companies

IREN GROUP

IREN Group, one of the main multiutilities in the Italian panorama, operates in the fields of electricity (production, distribution and sale), thermal energy for district heating (production and sale), gas (distribution and sale), management of integrated water services, environmental services (waste collection and disposal) and services for local governments.

Since 2015 the Group has been working through its Internationalisation and Innovation Division to promote and evaluate business opportunities abroad.

Many activities, already started in the previous year, continued in 2016. In particular, following the signing in 2015 of the Memorandum of Understanding with the City of Belgrade, IREN cooperated with Beogradske Elektrane, the company managing the district heating system of the Serbian city. A strategy of medium- and long-term industrial development of the company was conceived and, in the second half of 2016, the study results were presented to the City and to investors.

IREN, in partnership with Utilitalia and other Italian multiutilities and under the patronage of the Ministry for the Environment, Land and Sea Protection and the Italian Embassy in Beijing, organized a Chinese-Italian forum on district heating and environmental protection, which was held in Beijing in April 2016. During the forum, attended by more than 300 Chinese participants, IREN promoted its know-how and presented the Torino district heating system as an example of Italian excellence.

The Group is also very active in terms of calls for innovation promoted at European level, which are being developed through a network of national and international partners. In particular, in the field of district heating and energy efficiency, the European projects DIMMER and PROBIS were carried out and ended, while Flexmeter and CELSIUS are still underway. In 2016 the Group was involved in the STORE&GO project on the analysis of systems for the production of natural gas from electric power. As regards user empowering, the EMPOWERING project ended, while in the field of electric mobility and on-road charging of vehicles IREN participated in FABRIC and NeMo. In the water sector the BlueSCities, Geosmartcity, SmartWaterTech and WaterSpy projects are underway, while in the environmental field IREN is part of the BioMethER project.

SMAT Group manages the integrated water service of the City of Torino and other 291 municipalities of the Metropolitan City. The company, which has only public shareholders, is national leader in the areas of engineering, construction and management of diversified water sources, drinking water treatment plants, sanitation systems and recycling of urban waste water.

In 2016 SMAT continued its international activities with projects belonging to the Horizon 2020 programme, funded by the European Union. In particular, it carried on the DEMOSOFC project providing for the installation of the first industrial-scale SOFC (Solid Oxide Fuel Cell) plant for the production of electricity from biogas generated by waste water treatment. Aim of the project is to obtain clean energy, free from the emissions usually deriving from the endothermic engines. The partnership includes British and Finnish companies, as well as the Politecnico of Torino. SMAT started also the BIOWYSE project, foreseeing the development of kits for the instantaneous detection of the biocontamination level of water. The project aims to develop a biocontamination control system for water and humid areas, i.e. surfaces on which water is present as condensate. The prototype, designed for use on the International Space Station, will allow astronauts to monitor in real time the microbiological quality of water intended for consumption, which is currently manually sampled to be sent to Earth and analysed after several months.

SMAT is the technical partner of the Bethlehem Smart Water project, aimed at planning and setting up a remote control system of the water supply network in the Palestinian cities of Bethlehem, Beit Jala and Beit Sahour. The project involves also staff training and is supported by the Palestinian Municipalities Support Program (PMSP), by the Italian Consulate in Jerusalem, by the City of Torino, by Co.Co.Pa. and ATO3.

SMAT also joined the UNDP Lebanese Host Community Support Project, funded by ATO3, having as partners the City of Torino, the Metropolitan City of Torino and Co.Co.Pa. SMAT is in charge of training Lebanese technicians on the maintenance of pipeline networks and water leak detection with geophones, and of organizing technical visits to Lebanon.

Finally, SMAT participated as partner in the candidacy for the Human Space Flight for Research and Technological Demonstrations on the International Space Station project, along with the Department of Physics of the University of Pavia, the University of Rome Tor Vergata, ALTEC SpA, AVIOTEC Srl and Thales Alenia Space Italy, submitting the PERSEO Personal Radiation Shielding for IntErplanetary Missions project, which obtained a total funding of 382,000.00 euros. The project aims to assess the effectiveness of a wearable personal radiation protection system, to be used in a pressurized environment, to provide adequate shielding against Solar Particle Events (SPE) and to mitigate the effects of Galactic Cosmic Rays (GCR) on astronauts. This system will play an important role in the design of inhabited structures to be set in the lunar Lagrangian points and in future trips to reach asteroids. These projects are currently under study by major space agencies. The PERSEO project is unique in Europe.
